The power of the written word

NT KURIOCITY

To mark the death anniversary of T. B. Cunha, the Department of English at Vidya Prabodhini College, Porvorim, hosted a seminar titled 'The History of Goa's Freedom Struggle with a Special Focus on Literature.'

Led by historian and heritage activist Prajal Sakhardande, the seminar explored the role literature played in Goa's fight for independence.

Sakhardande, an associate professor of history at Dhempe College of Arts and Science, engaged the audience with his insights into how literary figures and freedom fighters used the written word to challenge Portuguese colonial rule. He emphasised that literature was not merely a record of the times, but a powerful tool that pushed the spirit of resistance against Portuguese colonial rule. During his presentation, Sakhardande traced the lives and works of figures like T.B. Cunha, showcasing how their writings sparked a sense of nationalism among Goans. "The literature of that period was pivotal in bringing people together and shaping public opinion, laying the groundwork for a collective struggle for freedom," he added.
